

Abstract

A photosensitive chip element is mounted in a totally clear package. The incoming light can pass through the package at any angle. The incoming light passed through the package is sensed by the photosensor and converted to a signal indicative thereof. Since the package is clear, no special way of mounting the chip is necessary.

BEST AVAILABLE COPY